

Volunteer Spotlight: Jeff Senter

NEW volunteer Jeff Senter has been fixing NEW's technology problems for the past 10 years. "I have really gotten to see the program grow," Jeff said. "When I first started volunteering with NEW, there were only a couple of computers, and people were using floppy disks. Now, there's a networked computer lab for the program participants to use."

In fact, Jeff was a key factor in getting NEW's computer lab up and running, and remains "on call" for computer problems and questions from NEW's staff and participants. For Jeff, the best part of his volunteer work is the chance to do something that actively impacts a person's life. "Most of the work that I do in my day-to-day job is pretty high level — I don't get to work with the end user. It's nice to work with people who really want to learn. Working with NEW, I can see that I am actually making a difference in someone else's life by teaching something they can really use."
